BOOK
MANUSCRIPT

Breaking the Exclusion Cycle: Contact, Discrimination, and Cooperation.
Manuscript under contract with Oxford University Press.

This book examines social exclusion and NGO efforts to end it. I explore exclusion at the level of the individual by studying the majority that discriminates and the minority that copes with that discrimination. I argue that when discrimination by the majority and coping strategies by the minority feed into one another, exclusion persists. I also argue that NGO-promoted dialogue and intergroup contact strategies can help people break out of the vicious cycle. While the theory portion of the book leans on several cases of social exclusion, past and present, the empirical portion is centered on the social exclusion of Roma.

Book conference held on August 29th, 2017 at the University of Oklahoma. Claire Adida, Alisa Fryar, Don Green, David Laitin, Isabela Mares, and Scott Robinson were in attendance.
